By the narrow margin of 74 to 71 an Australian ballot reform bill has been defeated in the lower branch of the Maine Legislature. This may be only temporary defeat. But it is a disagreeable surprise that in such a staunchly Republican State ballot reform should neet with a check. Twenty-me states have adopted laws similar to the one proposed in Maine and the passage of which would have enlisted exactly one-half the states in this notable and noble reform. The opposition to the bill was from elements of the party which discredit and disgrace k. Fortunately, the party has national organization is combitted so, firmly to ballot reform by the action of the great majority of its state organizations that the backset in Maine can have little serious effect except localty. The Republican party is for honest ballots everywhere.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24, 1891.

The Warning of Experience. We have taken pocasion before this to call attention to the muddle in Connecti cut as the result of the new ballot law. The Hartford Corrent in commenting upon the ballot agitations in Maine says:

upon the ballot agliations in Maine says:

The Kennebec Journal, of Augusta, Me., alluding to efficience of the Republican House of that State for failing to adept the Australian ba lot law, requests a suspension of judgment, fand intimates that some sort of "a secret ballot measure" will be adopted at this season.

From out of the countless troubles in which the State of Connecticut is involved, we would warn the Kennebec Journal and the Republicans of the Maioe Legislature to look before they cap. Know what you are doting, gentlemen, or don't do anything at all. In this State, a rigid and service able ballot law was thrown aside for an eleventh hour statue, to which all the troubles of the present crisis are trace-able.

The Course was thrown aside to the

The Courant respectfully advises the Haine Republicans to be very sure what they are voting for before they vote: A makeshift, ill-considered bill, a bill opt of one that has given eminent satisfaction for a good many pears, and substitute therefor a piece of experimental legislation. That this law is not adapted to the existing equations in Maine has been freely admitted by its friends. Its author abandoned the bill in its original form on just this ground after having made a careful dahvass of the House, The newspapers advocating it conceded towns, but now lost the Senate has passed. the original bill the purpose is to force this cumbersome measure upon the peo-ple. The members of the House should weigh well the winds of the Couract. words suggested by litter experience, and

The friends of this move pretend to attach particular importance to the fact that it passed the Senate by Republican votes, They thus make it a party question and if It went out of its way to insult the great they attach significance to the Republican bate in the Senate, it necessarily follows ture who are encount to the Anterlian that the same argument holds good in the House where the Republican majority against the bill is more than six times the longed to the "selements of the party which the Senate. These figures show that the great majority of Republican sentiment is opposed to the law and the more they are examined the more difficult is becomes to cite any substantial season why the House should reverse its previous action. When we also consider the fact that the Democrats with their forty-four votes held solid seems to think that THE WING's resentby a party caucus only fall four votes ment of this libet upon the representatives short of the Republican support of the of the people is the thing to be deplored bill, it affords an excellent reason for the rather than the publication of the libel in majority of the Republicans to stand to Australian logic.

Australian Misrepresentation. The Boston Journal continues to have a good deal to says about "ballot reform in In Maine." The particular place that seems to stand in pressing need of "reform" just at the present time is the editorial department of the Journal. It frequently complains of the fact that the Mugwump papers resort to falsehood and misrepresentation as the Basis of their CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH arguments, but there is not a Mugwump sheet in the country that could eclipse the Jarral's attitude on the ballot question in this State. For weeks it has allowed Rev. G. W. FIELD, D. D. its mistatement of the number of petitioners in Maine to stand appearrected, although on several occasions we have called its attention to the fact illust its figures were nearly ten times higher than the actual figures, and now it not only repeats the falsehood but has the impudence to even raise the figures again and now claims from 80,000 to 100,000 petitioners. We have always maintained that this movement was a bogus reform and the very tactics employed by the Journal confirm this view of the skuation. When it becomes necessary to deliberately raise tigures from 8,000 to 80,000 or 100,000 in order to sessiain the allegation OOO in order to gostain the allegation that Maine demands this change, it only goes to show that the Journal fully realized

Talk about a law to protect, the voter at the polls from intimidations. The tenor of the comment in certain newspapers would R. N. PARSANK, . - General Agent. lead one to believe that a law to protect the legislator from intimidation is more necessary. In all that has been said about the intimidation of voters, and there have has appeared that equals this flat-footed threat from the Press. Now what is it that has called forth this outburt? It is, of course, almed at Representative Drummond and his high orine is that he voted Siv Dan Cana Da cally declares that he is out of race when representatives are chosen in 1899. It maters not how he may stand on all the great principles of Republicanism; how entirely he may be ir sympathy with his party on all questions of vital importance to the State, couse he did not vote for this narticular measure, concerning which the most prejudiced person can but admit there is a wide difference of opinion among Republicads, be it to be set aside. . If there has been a plearer case of attempted intimidation in he State it has escaped our potice. This is instructive for the members of the Leg-If clearly demonstrates the dis nosition of themen who are trying to force this unnecessary legislation upon the people. They have adopted a rule or ruinpolicy. The Press has stultified itself on the subject but it ignores this fact and is now engaged in brow-beating members. Total It is not surprising that the members resent the high handed methods employed Capital actually paid up in cash..... by the Press and Kennebec Journal in the advocacy of this bill.

A Democratic View.

The following extract from the Portland correspondence of the Boston Glob shows how sovious the Democrats and Alliceses promptly adjusted and paid at office. saloon men are for the Australian ballot. The imputations of dishduesty in the city election are evidently of the backnesed type of excuses for defeat, but the writer betrays the eager Democratic confidence in the ability of that party to manipulate the secret ballot system to its advantage makeshift, fil-considered bill, a bill opt of the line of experience, is a mistake. Better have more nervis and not pass any secret ballot have a all, than to pass one which is golog to be barn rather than 2004.

This is the warning of experience and is linear solution of the great body of the Prohibitionists of the same proposition is now before the Maine Legislature. For some time past a few men bave been seeking to secure the overthrow of "a striceable ballot law,"

We do not think it a wise thing from any point of view, least of all from a party standpoint, to permit personst bitterness and asperly to enter into the discussion of any great public question. Let there be no wounds to heaf when this ballat controversy is over whetever may be the outcome of it. Abuse is never argument, and carries fittle influence. We trust that a tolerant spirit may ever prevail in the councils of the Republican party no matter how much its members may differ among low much its members may differ auto themselves upon any question of public weal or party policy.—Kennebec Journal,

RECOGNITION OF THE NEGRO.

WASHINGTON, March 23. The National Committee of the Africo-American Press Association called upon the President today and programed an address requesting that the negro be given a representative and prominent position in the Columbian World's Fair Commission, also suggesting the propriety and wisdom of selecting a capable negro jurist to fill a place on the bench of the federal judiciary.

The address set forth the claims of negrees to such appointments.

The President in response said in substance that so far as a position on the World's Fair Commission is concerned there are no vacancies and if one is to occur an alternate would fill the place. If I became possible to do anything and a proper man was presented be would make the presistent.

Thus authorized, Windward began a systematic search among the records; and dirty work indeed it was, but at tractive, not only from a legal and busi-ness standpoint, but from the many quaint strokes of human nature that appeared here and there in the correspondence But it was an enormous undertaking; a work of mouths, not days, for there were at least 1,500 claims, each with its little package of papers. To explore this whole mass was beyond hum, yet he persevered a day or two, hoping to light upon a striking case, and what was his delight to find his and what was his delight to find his search rewarded by the discovery of a thick bundle of letters in the familiar old style handwriting of Tom Bassett. He knew that his great-uncle had been intimate with Mr. Causten, and glancing over the letters rapidly he saw they covered a period of many years, and touched on a large number of topics of personal and family interest as well as business matters.

well as business matters. So, brushing off the dust, he began on his task with a born lawyer's love for musty family archives. The documents covered, it seemed, a period of more than twenty years, and recorded in a general way Ton Bassett's fortune, good and bad, in pushing the claim for that time, Incidentally, however, the writer had touched, with characteristic humor and kindliness, on many topics, showing that his intimacy with Mr. Causten had not been confined to business. The letters contained many pungent observations on historic characters and references to legislation of by-gone days, all of which found an eager reader in his favorite nephew, and in the light of his present circumsfances Windward was especially interested to find how affectionate had Turning over page after page in this manner he came suddenly on a passage in one of the letters which made him in one or one returns which an exclamation of agroups the sheet with an exclamation of agroupshment; and, like the lovers in "Ravenna," he "read no more that day." 'You be, Windward,' said the mother, smiling aappily as she stroked her dirling's land, 'it's so early yet; I have only met her once or twice, and you have known her only a few weeks. Of course she is pretty and bright and pleasant, but a wife is so much to a man; you want to know her disposition and health and funity, and he sure she loves you—do you think she does, Windward?' "How can I tell unless I ask her?' exclaimed the young man, hanging his head and twir ling his watch charm.

The mother smiled at her son's confusion, and yet rather eadly. Her instinct told her that the woong, as yet, was rather one sided; and, motherlike, she did not propose to have her child sacrifice.

Bear Shooting in Thibet.

As I drew near f saw a large bear standing in the river feeding on the carcass of a yak. Taking a gun from one of my men I fired at it, breaking its shoulder. When my men saw what I had shot at they turned and beat a hasty retreat, shouting to me to run, that the "wild man" might not devour me. Another shot, better aimed, put an end to the bear, but not to the fright of my Mongols, who even then would not approach. Character from the Fingers.

As far as the fingers are concerned, experts in palmistry divide hands into three chapes. Long, slender, tapering fingers determine the first, and denote delicate, trained perceptions. A subject with such fingers has an innate foundness for art, poetry, music and the higher forms of literature. In the second class, the fingers are shorter, are nearly equal in length, and have blunt ends. They denote a practical, susterial mind, thorough and reliable, rather than bell last. A western with such fingers would make a careful and estatest homesteeper, and a man with such fingers would make a careful and estatest to the continues and therough in business. In the third count, the fingers are chort, thirties and aquare, and have short, hongs halfs, with crathers on tech side of the nails, it appliest above, there is action. Character from the Fingers:

AN ANCIENT FARM HOUSE What the Franch Hest-Inles Wers Like

The farm house—which in England was always constructed with a southern aspec—as invariably faced the east in Aquitams, while to the rear well open to the west was a long tiled veranda, where is winter afternoons the hemp picking the wool carding, etc., were done.

Within the vast kitchen glowed in the light of the fire—almost as unertimentallight of the fire—almost as unertinguishable as the vestal virgin's—peat, coal and wood were each abundantly employed, wood were each abundantly employed, and for a trifling rent, g-neartly paid in kind, the lord of the manor would permit the farmers on his I and to cut their turfs from his log or the'r boughs from his forest. Fuel was no only actually but relatively cheaper in the middle ages than today, for the bogs were not drained in those days, the forest covered was a constant of the second of the covered was to account to the second of the covered was to account to the covered was to account great expanses, and the cost of carriage made it almost impossible to transpert their produce. In almos every shire of France and England the supply of fuel was in excess of the demand:

The registers of the chatelet record no crime so common as the breaking open of such wedding chests, and it is surprising how many clasps of jewels, girdles of pearls, golden headdresses and rings, and purses full of gold were stolen from quite humble households. THE MALOT DEBATE (Continued from First Page.)

In regard to the uscessity of a measure of this kind. The matter was beard before the indictary committee at two several times. Notice was given in every daily paper in the State of Maine and in many weekly papers; and it was carefully considered by the committee; and a great many citizens in whom we have perfect confutince, in high position, came before the committee. Many of them said it was their opinion that the measure should be adopted. There was a member of the national Republ.can committee, a member of the State committees; but they did not claim for a moment, they denied the fact, that there was intimidation at the polis to the extent that was claimed by many of the friends of this measure. One who stood upon the floor of the Senate two years ago and advocated this measure, said he did not believe it would eradicate fraud and intimidation that existed at the ipolis but he said, as long as human nature remained as it is new, as long as men could be found to buy and men could be found to buy and men could be found to be found to have a long as the cound to found the flow of the first there would be fraud and intimidation at the polis. If that is the fact, why adopt this measure at this time. If it is the sentiment of the people that there is fraud and intimidation at the polis and that it will always exist, why adopt a measure of this importance at this time. As to the necessity of adopting this measure, let me any very briefly that the measure was first introduced into Australia—into a penal colony of Great Britian, composed of convicts, ticket-of-leave menmen who had been banished from civilization—the outcasts of, a great government, and it was considered that radical measure were necessary. They donsidered that this matter in Australia was a necessitive but I ask if any such conditions extended that this matter in Australia was a necessitive but I ask if any such conditions extended that the measure were necessary. For the last few weeks, in the discussion of this matter, the ery of "bribery and intimiduation" has not been heard; but it has been claimed that the people want it. The people claim there is a necessity for it, and yet but 8,000 petuloners out of the whole 125,000 voters have petitioned for it. Is that, evidence of intimidation? Is that an Indication that there is a call for it from the people of the State? I do not believe for a moment the Senators will claim that it follows. They have failed to show that there have failed to show that there have been any contested elections; and let me say here that there is hardly even a contested election in Maine; and in these States to-day where the Australian ballot bill is in force there are very many contested election cases, and in the Dalimbian of canade many contested in the Dalimbian of the Dalimbian of the Dalimbian of the Dalimbian of the Canade many contested in the Dalimbian of the Dalimbian of th Breadstuffs, Grain, etc. and in these States to-day where the answerigen ballot bill is in force there are very many contested election cases, and in the Dominion of Canada more than 40 per cent. of the seats in Parliament will be contested on account of fraud; and the next morning after the election in the Dominion of Canada the supers were teeming with reless of "fraud and lutimidation at the polis," and yet the Dominion of Canada the supers were teeming with reless of "fraud and lutimidation at the polis," and yet the Dominion of Canada has to-day virtually the Australian system of voting. The facts show that in States where the Australian ballot is in vogue, there is as much intimidation and bribery as they claim anywhere else, and they have failed to show any example of any State where the Australian system is in vogue and has remedied to the east extent any of the evils which they claim exist; I say it is but fair they should show it; and I say they should have proof of the necessity and that it will accomplish what is claimed will be accomplished before we should be called upon to adopt it.
